LINDBERGH'S ARE HEADING NORTH OVER THE JUNGLE

Take-Off From Manaos, Brazil, for Port of Spain, Trinidad

CROWD AT TAKE-OFF

Must Cross Dense Swamp Lands and Then Mountain Range

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad, Dec. 12.—Flying a true course due northward over the trackless jungles of northern Brazil, Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh passed the half way mark on their flight from Manaos to the Port of Spain today.

PARA, Brazil, Dec. 12.—Making fast time over the jungles of Northern Brazil, Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh reported themselves more than 400 miles out from Manaos at 8.40 a. m., eastern standard time.

A wireless message sent by Mrs. Lindbergh and received at the Pan-American airway station here said they were 300 miles south of Boa Vista at that hour, flying at an altitude of 10,000 feet. The sky was five-tenths overcast but visibility was unlimited.

The first and last part of the Manaos-Trinidad route was suitable for an emergency landing of the seaplane, although a forced landing over the greater part of the journey would mean a certain crash.

The Lindberghs first flew in a north-eastern direction over the Negro River and then headed due northward when they came to the junction of the Rio Branco. Toward the end of their flight the Lindberghs expect to strike the Orinoco River and follow it to the coast.

MANAOS, Brazil, Dec. 12.—(INS)—Heading northward over jungle wilderness, Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh took off from here at 6.48 a. m. today (4.48 a. m., E. S. T.) for Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, about 1,000 miles away.

Their great red seaplane took off gracefully from the Negro River as a cheering crowd bid them farewell.

Ahead of the Lindberghs lay 600 miles of dense jungles and impenetrable swamps known as "The Green Hell," parts of it are inhabited by Indians, but most of the wilderness never has been invaded by man.

Past the Brazilian wilds the route lay across a mountain range at the Venezuelan frontier which rises to a height of about 2,000 feet.

From here the trip was comparatively easy, being over Venezuela, to her coastal cities, and then, finally, across the Gulf of Paria, lying between Venezuela and Trinidad, to Port-of-Spain.

Col. Lindbergh abandoned the idea of travelling the comparatively safer but longer routes eastward and westward.

Gifts Exchanged When The S. S. Girls Have Meeting

Miss Anna Keers, 1528 Jackson street, was hostess last evening to members of the S. S. Girls and a few other friends. The evening was spent playing games, singing and dancing. The members also exchanged Christmas gifts.

NEWSBOYS PLAY IMPORTANT PART

IN BUSINESS OF THE WORLD TODAY; ONLY BIG BUSINESS CONDUCTED BY BOYS

Devote About An Hour To Work After School Each Day

Article I.

This afternoon, promptly after school is out, several hundred thousand boys, in cities, towns and hamlets from coast to coast, will hasten to attend to a highly important matter of business. It is a business of the greatest social significance, and a service which the country couldn't very well get along without—the delivery of its newspapers. Incidentally, it is the only big business in this country largely conducted by schoolboys.

Even in as small a community as Bristol the business of delivering newspapers is one in which a number of boys are engaged and the income derived therefrom means much to them and to their parents. It is estimated there are at least 30 boys in Bristol who contribute to the support of their families by delivering newspapers. The Courier employs eight carriers in Bristol borough while others at Tullytown, Edgely, Newportville, West Bristol, Hulmeville, Croydon, Cornwells Heights, Andalusia and Torresdale make daily delivery of the Courier to subscribers in those sections.

In an hour, most of them will have covered their routes and be ready for play. Many of them, carriers for out-of-town newspapers in their home villages or younger boys getting their first training, will have finished their daily chore when they have delivered 10 to 20 newspapers. Others who by diligence, promptness and good school records have won advancement to special circulation districts or street stands of their own, will put in more time. Tomorrow morning, another army of boys will deliver the morning newspapers to the breakfast tables of the nation. On the average, the 588,287 boys who deliver and sell newspapers put in an hour and a half a day. They earn, in the course of a year, approximately $100,000,000.

These impressive figures, brought out recently during hearings on the Daily Newspaper Code, have brought to publishers, social workers, parents and school authorities the country over a new realization of the social and economic importance of this part-time work to the boyhood of the nation. Under the conditions of modern life, there are few jobs that a boy can do, outside of school hours, to earn his spending money, although boys today have more leisure than formerly. For the average city boy, there is no wood to chop, no coal to carry, no cows to bring in from the pasture at milking time—none of the chores that boys used to do. The depression, while making it more difficult for parents to supply the money for many of the things boys need and want, has reduced the number of errands and odd-jobs by which boys can earn money for themselves. The 588,287 part-time jobs provided by newspapers, therefore, are of great importance.

RESCUE SQUAD FETES AUXILIARY MEMBERS

Men Reciprocate With Party At Home of Mrs. Helen Phillips

OTHER CROYDON NEWS

CROYDON, Dec. 12.—At the residence of Mrs. Helen Phillips, Main street, Saturday evening, a return party by male members of the Bucks County Rescue Squad to members of the Auxiliary occurred. This proved a most delightful affair.

A sumptuous repast was served, and later instrumental music, singing and dancing enjoyed. The quartet of the squad sang "Good Night Ladies" as a concluding feature.

The Wilkie family members are recuperating. Mrs. W. Wilkie and daughter, Anna, suffered from tonsillitis and Harry Wilkie met with an accident at Frankford avenue and Benner street, Philadelphia. While trying to avoid a collision he struck a pole and was cut about the face and head. He was taken to Frankford Hospital, where an X-ray was taken.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Trindle and family are now living in an apartment on Wyoming avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillips, Second avenue, are happy over the birth of a daughter.

TO GET FUEL TAX

Bucks County is to receive $37,849 as its share of the liquid fuels tax collected during the six months ending November 30th.

Church Benefit Will Include Humorous Play and Bazaar

NEWPORTVILLE, Dec. 12.—A church benefit Christmas bazaar will take place in Newportville Church basement Saturday evening, at eight o'clock.

At that time there will be a unique program by the Cheerful Workers which consists of a humorous play called "Welcoming the New Minister."

Among those taking part are: Mrs. Clifford Ingram, Mrs. Charles Everett, Mrs. Raymond Given, Mrs. Jane Lee, Mrs. Helen Birkey, Miss Caroline Black, Mrs. William Grimwood, Mrs. Frederick Wimmersberger, Mrs. Joseph Dixon, Miss Lillian Cameron, Mrs. Alfred Wright, Mrs. William Cameron, Mrs. Walter Pirmann, Mrs. E. Bowers, Mrs. Edward Martin, Mrs. George Ernie, and Mrs. Raymond Dewees.

There is to be no admission charged. During the course of the evening many hand-made Christmas gifts will be on sale at nominal cost.

This is a rare treat and a large attendance is expected as it is an annual affair. The proceeds will be used for church upkeep.

FATALITY LIST MOUNTS AS COLD CONTINUES

Over Dozen Perish in State; Many Accidents Due To Ice

16 HERE AT 7.30 A. M.

Thermometers in Bristol this morning at 7.30 registered 16 degrees above zero, and light snow is promised for tonight.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 12.—Jack Frost and Old Man Winter met in a rendezvous of cold and tragedy throughout Pennsylvania today as an ever-mounting fatality toll recorded more than a dozen deaths. Added to this were the hospital lists ranging into the hundreds as people were injured in accidents and falls. All cold records for December 12th were shattered as the mercury tumbled to 7 in Pittsburgh. The former record was 12 established in 1912. Pittsburgh was the coldest spot of the eastern half of the United States, weather map revealed. A slow warming up is in prospect, the forecast predicted, but emphasized it would be a slow rise. Meanwhile Harrisburg and Philadelphia also shivered in lows for the year. At the state capitol, a low of 15 was recorded and on the eastern seaboard the temperature dropped to 19. No genuine relief was in sight until at least Thursday.

Rocco Sincero and William D. Troup, 48, boosted Philadelphia's death toll to 5. Scores were hurt in automobile accidents as strong gales and icy streets paralyzed traffic. Throughout the state ice and snow covered the roads. Cinder crews of the State Department still were at work today after more than 24 hours of duty in getting roads cleared. All sections of the State were covered with a white blanket. Airlines reported conditions improving with passenger ships coming through on schedule. Trains were also reporting normal operation again today following delays yesterday caused by the blizzard which swept the state Sunday night.

THROWS BOMB IN TRAM

Madrid, Spain, Dec. 12.—The business section of Madrid was thrown into excitement today when an unidentified man threw a bomb into a tram car. The bomb exploded but no one was injured. The perpetrator was shot by civil guards.

BELGIUM NOT TO PAY DEBT

Brussels, Belgium, Dec. 12.—The Belgian government today decided to inform the United States government it would not pay its December 15th debt installment. The present economic crisis and the loss of Belgium reparations payments from Germany will be given as the reason. The action was taken following presentation of a diplomatic note by the American Ambassador reminding Belgium the payment would fall due.

WIN OUT OVER CODE

Washington, D. C., Dec. 12.—With all indications pointing toward a partial victory for code-dissenting cleaners and dyers who seek lower minimum retail prices, the alleged violators of the industry's code today were to show cause why they should not be subject to Federal prosecution. Although the hearing was called to permit violators of the code to justify their position and to show cause why their cases should not be turned over to the Federal Trade Commission or the Department of Justice for prosecution, it was indicated that few, if any, violators would be prosecuted.

PRESIDENT'S PROGRAM IN ACTION

Washington, D. C., Dec. 12.—President Roosevelt's foreign trade expansion program swung into active operation today with former A. A. Administrator George N. Peek in charge. Peek headed the temporary committee which immediately began a survey over a field of possible expansion of trade on the theory of exchange of goods. Within two weeks this body will recommend to the President a form for permanent machinery to handle this work. The former Agricultural Administrator will remain in charge of the trade work whatever form the permanent organization takes. He was named to direct the temporary committee in the capacity of Special Assistant to the President on trade policy. Peek's removal from the post of A. A. Administrator settled a dispute of many weeks. He and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace differed violently with regard to a number of policies and it was felt that after their opposing views were, to some extent, aired, the Department was too small for both. The new trade work is the answer.

FATHERS TO PRESENT A UNIQUE PROGRAM

Capitol Juvenile Minstrel Revue To Be Seen at Next Meeting

AN UNUSUAL FEATURE

The Bristol Fathers' Association has secured the Capitol Juvenile Minstrel Revue, to furnish the entertainment at their regular meeting, to be held in the high school auditorium, on Thursday evening. This aggregation consists of 20 young people who offer a pleasing program of songs, acrobatic feats and dancing numbers.

Inasmuch as the entertainment will be of an extraordinary character, the Fathers' Association has decided to invite the ladies to attend. In consequence, an invitation is extended to the wives and families of the members, and to the members of the Mothers' Association, to be present.

In addition to the novelty of the entertainment, interest centers in the new officers who are to be installed at this meeting. Richard French, who has presided over the destinies of the Association during the past year in such a satisfactory manner, is retiring at his own request. He will be succeeded by Roy Fry, who is well known as a councilman from the fifth ward, and as the chairman of the borough police committee.

All members, whether they are in good standing or not, are requested to attend the meeting, and take their wives and families with them. The meeting is called for 8 o'clock and as the program will be rather lengthy, it is hoped the audience will be prompt in assembling.

COUNCIL RECESSES TO MEET AT CALL OF CHAIR

Burgess Anderson Says Water Mains Extension Details Will Be Ready Soon

POLICE MAKE REPORT

Burgess Clifford L. Anderson, last night, in addressing borough council, informed the members that the details in connection with the extension of the borough water mains into Bristol Township were now being arranged.

Mr. Anderson stated that it was the opinion of Borough Solicitor Howard I. James, that the necessary papers would be prepared within the next two or three days, and that then council would be called together, to approve the entire project.

At the suggestion of Burgess Anderson council recessed to meet at the call of the chair.

Police committee reported the officers made 14 arrests during the month and that the cases were disposed of as follows:

Fined, 2; released, 5; held for court, 5; committed to jail, 2.

One hundred and ninety-five lodgers were given shelter, three doors found open and four are and three incandescent lights reported out.

Councilmen present were Winter, Wagner, Warner, Wiesner, Myers, Vandegrift, Fry, Spezzano, Winslow, Fallon, Spencer, Pfeiffer.

The fireplace is an astonishingly well preserved relic of the vanished "shell-midden men of La Jolla," who inhabited this region in the centuries when Egypt and Chaldea were developing their civilizations, Rogers said.

One of the Victims of the Dual Shooting Leaves a Wife and Nine Children—The Family Is Almost Destitute—House Sold by Sheriff Only A Few Months Ago

A Bristol man walked across the street from his home last night, and shot and killed his neighbor. Then he returned to his own home, told his 11-year-old son to leave the house, sat down in a chair in the living room and killed himself.

The murdered man: Frank DeMarco, 40, 1012 Elm street.

The suicide: John Princivilla, 63, 1015 Elm street.

The motive for the tragedy as uncovered by the police is that DeMarco owed Princivilla $5 for several months.

The shooting occurred about nine o'clock in an alley between Elm and Chestnut streets. It took place almost at the rear entrance to the DeMarco residence.

DeMarco, who died shortly after being admitted to the Harriman Hospital, told the police he knew of no reason for the shooting except that he owed Princivilla the money.

According to the story told Chief Jones, Patrolman Ferry and County Detective Russo, DeMarco came outside of his house at about nine o'clock to call his son. As he walked along the side of his home he saw the door of the Princivilla house, directly opposite, open and Princivilla come out, cross the street, with a pistol in his hand. He approached DeMarco and before DeMarco knew what was going to happen, fired at him three times with a .32 automatic Colt. DeMarco dropped and the crack of the pistol attracted the attention of Edward Bonner, Mary Bonner and Mrs. Jennie Graham. The trio ran to the man and picked him up. He was taken to the hospital. Princivilla then returned to his home.

In the kitchen of the Princivilla home sat Joseph Princivilla, 11, eating a lunch. He told the police his father came in the house and told him to "get out. I'm going to shoot myself." The youngster, frightened, ran into the house of the neighbor next door. Some say one shot was heard, while others state they heard two shots. Police were called and found Princivilla dead, fully clothed and hat on, slumped down in a chair in the living room.

The bullet had entered the right side of the neck directly through the jugular vein. It came out on the opposite side and was found on the floor of the dining room. The gun was on the floor at Princivilla's feet. Coroner John J. Sweeney, Doylestown, was called, and he thinks that perhaps two shots were fired and that one remained in the man's neck.

Both Princivilla and DeMarco had been out of employment for a long time. Princivilla was a widower with five children. He lived with his 11-year-old son at the Elm street address. The other children, some of them married, resided nearby, and the unmarried ones made their homes with them.

DeMarco lived with his wife and nine children, and so far as is known was a quiet and peaceful resident. Princivilla's children say their father has worried since the death of their mother four years ago. His home was neatly kept and he looked after the welfare of his son, Joseph.

Two of the shots fired at DeMarco entered his left leg, and the third entered the abdomen.

It is stated that Princivilla on several occasions had demanded payment of the money he had loaned DeMarco. DeMarco had promised to repay the loan as soon as he secured work.

Mrs. DeMarco, after recovering from the shock of the tragedy, said that she and her son, Alexander, 12, were in the kitchen when she heard the shot. "Then my husband called for me: 'Mary, Mary, help me,' he called."

Mrs. DeMarco and her son went to the aid of the dying man. Mrs. Graham and Mr. and Mrs. Bonner were also attracted. DeMarco was assisted to the kitchen of his home where he slumped into a faint on a chair. Whiskey was administered and he revived and told as well as he could what had happened.

According to Mrs. DeMarco and Mrs. Graham, DeMarco said that he had gone outside to call his children into the house. He met Princivilla in the alleyway. The men greeted each other as friends.

BETTER WEATHER FORECASTS

For some years the meteorological service has wanted to extend and improve its weather readings by adding facilities which would make possible daily observations of upper air conditions, a field intensively developed in some European countries but almost wholly neglected in the United States.

When the Federal Government began economizing with the result that a number of observation stations were abandoned and the meteorological personnel was reduced by 60, the weather bureau seemed farther than ever from its goal. No doubt its plans were pigeon-holed to await better days.

Now it sees a chance to put its program into effect. The science advisory board, which the President appointed last summer, reports that observations in the upper air are essential to the air-mass analysis system and suggests that such observations be made by the army and navy, so as to involve no additional burdens upon the government. Since planes in the military service are in the air every day of the year, there seems no legitimate reason why the should not perform this additional chore, especially in view of the fact that the air service benefits from forecasts of atmospheric conditions.

Nothing should be left undone which will make weather forecast more complete and reliable. Upon them depend human life, valuable property and commerce. In this department of governmental endeavor there can easily be false economy.

110-MILE TRAIN SPEED

American railroads operate 50,000 passenger cars, costing $30,000 each, 4,000 dining cars costing $50,000 each and thousands of locomotives and freight cars running the total cost of their rolling stock into the billions of dollars. Within a short time all of the rolling stock used in passenger service, including the latest type locomotive, will be junked, railroad men say.

This promised revolution in railroading will be brought about by the development of new streamlined light-weight passenger trains capable of averaging 110 miles an hour under gasoline locomotion. These trains of the future will weigh less than a third as much as the typical train of today.

And when one speaks of the "future" it is of tomorrow, not of a fabulous future. Railroads are already building trains after this amazing model and will have them in operation in a matter of months.

Railroad possibilities as a result of this development include faster railroad transportation, lower rates, heavier schedules, the return to the rails of much business lost to the air and road, and the revolutionizing of the whole railroad industry.

Competition against which the railroads have fought for years is responsible for this step forward. Necessity is the mother of invention.

Still time to do it early.

the largest field of activity in which boys can engage without interfering with their school work. The $100,000,000 earned annually in this manner represents the economic independence of more than half a million young Americans. That $100,000,000 doubtless pays for a good share of all the baseball and football equipment, bicycles, skates and fishing tackle sold in this country. It helps to pay for such things as Boy Scout, Y. M. C. A. and boys' club memberships, trips to camp and other activities important to the welfare of boys, which many of them could not otherwise afford.

More important still, it is enabling thousands of ambitious boys to remain in school, to educate themselves and to contribute to the support of families that sorely need this small, but regular income. Many a high school boy with a good paper route is contributing more to his family than his older brother is able to send home from a C. C. C. camp.

Evidence submitted at hearings on the newspaper code emphasized the above-average school work done by newspaper boys. This was to have been expected. Most newspapers cooperate closely with school authorities, requiring that each boy show evidence of satisfactory grades and attendance before assigning him a route or a district. The motive for this is a practical one. Circulation managers have found that boys who do good school work also do the best newspaper work.

The whole theory of modern circulation management is based on two things: selecting steady, ambitious boys to start with and encouraging them, by rewards and increased opportunity, to do good work. Good grades in school help a boy to obtain his paper route. Promptness, diligence, lack of complaints from subscribers and good school work help him to obtain a larger district and to earn more.

The "little merchant plan," rapidly gaining in popularity, is based on this principle of enlarged opportunity as a reward for effort, and emphasizes the educational side of the work these boys are doing. First, the boy is encouraged to read the paper he sells. As a salesman, he must know his product in order to present its features properly to prospective readers. That is good business, since new subscribers mean additional earnings for the boy, but it also tends to make him a better student and ultimately a better informed citizen.

Second, the boy learns self-reliance and business fundamentals by conducting a small-scale business of his own. He buys his papers at wholesale and sells them at retail. His profit depends on the difference between what he pays for them and what he collects. He is a merchant, salesman, deliveryman, credit man and collector.

Surely practical training of this sort, teaching boys the value of a dollar in terms of honest effort and inculcating the fundamental principles of business, is a highly desirable supplement to what they learn at school.

FRENCH PLANE SHOW

PARIS — (INS) — Flimsy little airplanes set on what look like bicycle wheels are on exposition here in the Petit Palais. They are part of the exhibits showing the aerial evolution of France. The exposition, which will continue until the end of the year, is probably the most complete exhibition of its kind ever gathered under one roof.

Fights Extradition

Although a writ for his extradition was signed by Governor Henry Horner, of Illinois, James A. La Rue, fugitive from a Florida chain gang, recently captured in Chicago, gained a respite when Judge Alfred Erickson forbade the prisoner's removal from the State. The judge told La Rue that freedom was virtually certain.

SYNOPSIS

Fear that Bill McGee, the racketeer, would wreak vengeance on her and her family if she refused to go out with him, caused lovely Patricia Warren to accept his invitations. Bill is shot by a rival gangster while in Pat's company. Pat rushes home in terror and her stepmother puts her out, saying the police are looking for Pat. Unable to find employment, Pat resorts to her card skill and plays professional bridge. Julian Haverholt, noted bridge expert, makes her his partner. While they are discussing business details at his home, Clark Tracy, the polo player and Pat's secret love, calls. She had met him once but he does not recognize her. Haverholt introduces Pat as his niece. She is indignant, but he explains later that he was thinking of her reputation and that it would be advisable for her to assume that role as long as she is to stay at his home. Accustomed to poverty, Pat revels in the luxury of her surroundings. Reading an announcement of Clark's approaching marriage to Marthe March, Pat experiences pangs of jealousy. Following the settling of a bridge argument, Haverholt wants to give Pat a gift to celebrate their coming to an agreement. He selects a roadster like Marthe March's. Noting Pat's disappointment when Clark goes away with his fiancée's family and breaks an appointment to teach her how to drive, Haverholt asks her if she is in love with Clark. She denies it. Days go by with nothing but bridge and Pat is exhausted. The great test comes when Pat and Haverholt enter a tournament sponsored by Reuben Blair, Haverholt's bitter rival.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

They reached the hotel. The club rooms were on the fourteenth floor. Somehow, Patricia had expected unusual excitement in the lobby. There was none. The Hotel Winston, a smart Park Avenue hotel, accepted the fact of a major bridge tournament with surprising equanimity. One or two of the clerks recognized Haverholt and whispered about him and his young companion, that was all.

"There isn't much bally-hoo, is there?" said Patricia, when they were waiting for the elevator. "Reuben Blair's way of doing things," commented Haverholt disgustedly. "He thinks the press is vulgar. I'd have this hotel simply boiling with reporters. I'd have crowds in the street. I'd have—"

"A brass band in the lobby?" suggested Patricia.

"Not quite that," conceded Haverholt, unsmilingly. "But the day is coming and Blair will have to see it, when contract bridge will belong not to the few but to the public."

"And you will be king of it all?"

"I am king," admitted Haverholt simply.

They stepped into the elevator and swooped upward.

"By the way," said the bridge expert casually, "Clark is back from Aiken. He may be on hand tonight. I thought it best to warn you."

"Why?" she asked calmly enough.

"I was afraid his presence might upset your play."

"Then, you were quite wrong," Patricia told him.

But, her heart had set up the old wild tumult and her hands were as cold as ice.

The fourteenth floor was jammed. Ballyhoo or no ballyhoo, the real bridge lovers of the city and their satellites had managed to collect there. The velvet-carpeted, softly lighted corridors giving on the card-rooms rilled with men in evening dress and bright-eyed, eager women. It was a cosmopolitan, typically New York gathering, where were society people pausing at dinner and the theater, a dowager or two, splendid in jewels, reminiscing of the days of bridge whist, several actresses, not really interested in cards, but anxious to be seen at so smart an occasion, a sprinkling of the more reputable politicians, present by invitation, drifting uneasily here and there, a movie magnate, alert for color, a famous writer looking bored and self-conscious, waiting for his wife to complete her conversation. Professional bridge players, of course, in the majority.

Tension and excitement were in the air. People were laughing and talking, placing bets with each other on favorites for the evening, discussing the most extraordinary hand I ever held, my dear. . . .

Immediately upon their appearance Patricia and Haverholt were besieged. Patricia acknowledged introductions to dozens of people. She smiled at the movie magnate, she shook hands with the famous writer, she accepted the good wishes of a blue-eyed, exotic actress, who had closed in the most successful play of the season just last week. Patricia felt herself carried along by a dizzying, exciting wave of popularity. Silly she knew, but she was thrilled by it. It was fun to be somebody, fun, she confessed to herself a little shamefacedly, to be Patricia Haverholt. Hero-worshippers, friends of Haverholt's, acquaintances, utter strangers, hemmed her in, exclaiming, admiring, questioning. Yes, she said over and over, it was her first tournament; yes, she was excited; thank you, she hoped to do well.

"Has Blair turned up yet?" she heard Haverholt ask someone.

"I hear he isn't coming, that his secretary will make the presentation tonight."

A little significant laugh ran through the group.

"He's ducked out because I'm an entrant," Haverholt summed it up with a laugh. "Reuben is busy trying to save his face."

The floodgates were opened. The clamor grew. The reputation of the absent host was ripped to shreds by his guests, Haverholt assisting enthusiastically. Patricia liked this less. But, just then, she glimpsed Clark Tracy, browner than when she had last seen him, tanned by the southern sun. He waved, smiled and threaded toward them.

Patricia had thought she would be shaken by the encounter. She was not. Her taste of success, the coming tournament, her own assured position, braced her so that she could greet him as she would any other casual acquaintance, naturally, simply, even a little absentmindedly. Clark must be introduced all around first, he must speak to his own friends in the group, he must add his own good wishes for the Haverholt team, before he had his moment with her, and then not alone.

"I've been back from Aiken for several days," he began, seeing his chance to get in a word. "I've been meaning to give you a ring."

"Have you?" she asked with youthful indifference.

Flushed and lovely in the golden gown, smiling here and there, nodding, taking for granted the admiring glances that came her way, Patricia was a picture of poised and confident and exquisite girlhood. Looking down into her eyes, Clark felt a slow, unwilling stir of the pulses. He had an odd desire to capture the attention she was bestowing so lavishly upon others, to fix it upon himself. After all he had known her since her first day in the city, far longer than had any of the babbling fools who now surrounded her.

"I was sorry," he resumed awkwardly. "Sorry I wasn't able to teach you to drive."

"That was all right, I understood," she told him so kindly that he felt vaguely irritated. She spoke to someone beside her, "Yes, Mr. Billings, it's true that I've played bridge since the cradle. But, my present game, of course, is based on Julian's."

Her eyes returned lazily to Clark.

He said a little stiffly, "I had been hoping that it wasn't yet too late. Or, are you driving now?"

"I'm a battle-scarred veteran," she declared gayly and with a total disregard for the truth. "I expect to tackle traffic on Monday."

"Patricia," interrupted Julian sharply, "We must go into the card rooms. They've opened the doors."

Clark held her one last moment. "Have I offended you?"

"How in the world could you?" demanded Patricia, wide-eyed.

"What made you ask?"

His own voice had been low. Hers, in a lull in the general conversation, was uncomfortably distinct. The man flushed. He could not say before other listeners that she seemed less friendly. Perhaps, she did not, perhaps he only imagined a subtle change in her attitude, a change that distressed him disproportionately. He said, "I fancied for a minute that I had."

"Well, you haven't."

"Patricia, do come along, we must take our places."

"Will you and Miss Haverholt be at Belmont next week for the races?" Clark put in, hurriedly, almost desperately trying to hold them.

"I may cut my throat in the morning," drawled Julian. "On the other hand, I may be at the race track next week. I couldn't say at the moment, Clark."

And so they left him, Haverholt, grinning at Clark's discomfiture. That young man should know better than to seek a future appointment at the beginning of an important tournament.

Patricia absently agreed. Her whole mind was on the coming ordeal. The card rooms, two of them thrown together for the occasion, were severely furnished with two parallel rows of bridge tables, seven in each row, each table numbered and shining in its separate pool of light. Water pitchers and glasses, ash trays fastened to the tables, dozens of aluminum boards containing the cards, pencils, score pads; straight backed armless chairs for the players. A singularly undramatic setting, thought Patricia.

The scene itself was dramatic enough. Fifty-six professional bridge players, dissatisfied with the seating, dissatisfied with the arrangements, nervous as runners awaiting the gun, hostilely eyeing prospective opponents, giving a last word of advice to partners, quarreling with the attendants who ran to and fro trying to get everyone settled. Fifty-six professional bridge players, gathered to compete for a silver cup and the honor of winning it. The good wishes were over. The lightness was gone. Everyone kept his good wishes for himself.

No visitors were allowed. No one was allowed to watch the play. A few representatives of bridge magazines, Haverholt's and Blair's magazines among them, skulked in the background, properly authorized to copy the play and bidding of the more interesting hands at the end of the evening.

"Frightened, Patricia?" asked Haverholt.

"Not a bit," she denied, white to the lips.

"Here we are, I think. We start as North and South, table 3."

Patricia, weak-kneed, sat down, watched others seating themselves around her.

MEAT, POTATOES and GRAVY

MANY a meal is built around these three standbys—meat, potatoes and gravy. Invariably they are the first dishes that come to your mind as you plan your dinner.

But in spite of their hunger-satisfying and nourishing qualities, this time-honored triumvirate can become monotonous unless it is supplemented by other dishes.

However, it is often a problem to find these "side dishes" in your own head. Of course you can quiz your neighbor, or ask the members of your family what they would like. But even this source of information is often lacking in ideas.

The thing to do is read the advertisements in your newspaper. Every day your local markets display their foodstuffs on those printed pages. You'll read of new vegetables and fruits that have "just arrived." Your appetite will be aroused by the tasty creations of national food manufacturers. With pencil and paper you can make your market list and menus before you step out of the house.

Speaking of monotony, consider this. There are 11 different cuts of beef, 9 cuts of veal, 7 of lamb, 10 of pork; there are at least 20 different breakfast cereals sold in every store, 16 different canned vegetables, 6 canned fruits, a dozen or more canned meats and fish, numberless varieties of cakes and crackers. Why should there be monotony in meals with such a variety of foods available at your store and so many of them advertised in your paper?

ASTURIAS PRINCESS WEARS NEAT ENSEMBLE OF GREEN AND BROWN

Collar of Fur Vest Ties in Knot Just Under The Chin

By Nadia De Beaud

(I. N. S. Fashion Correspondent)

PARIS, Dec. 12.—Strolling through the Hotel Ritz at tea time, I noted the Princess of Asturias, the Cuban heiress, Mlle. de San Pedro, whom the heir to the Spanish throne recently married against his father's wishes. She wore a green ensemble with a waistcoat of brown Persian lamé from Worth that is a new note this season. The collar of the fur vest came over the jacket of the suit and tied in a knot under the chin with a green satin bow, that was most bewitching. It was Worth, who made the wedding gown for the young bride, but the whole proceedings were wrapped in mystery at the time owing to the ex-King of Spain's opposition to the match.

I also noted a number of suits and coats with sleeves of fur or in contrasting material, a novelty introduced this winter by Mainbocher.

HARRISBURG.—(INS)—Products of industrial plants in the 43 third class cities in Pennsylvania had a value of $512,228,300 in 1932, according to a survey made by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Internal Affairs.

This was approximately 20 per cent. of the total value of all industrial products in Pennsylvania. The third class city output was approximately 30 per cent. less than the value of $1,047,655,000 placed on industrial products in the 43 cities in 1931.

A total of 211,264 persons were employed in the 3,371 industrial establishments in third class cities. Wages and salaries represented approximately 30 per cent. of the value of the products.

BREED BULLFROGS

JACKSON, Mich.—(INS)—A number of Jackson county citizens have taken to raising bullfrogs as a result of the depression. Established on a bit of low marshy land near the lakes, these frog farmers are now patiently awaiting the coming of Spring so they may determine what their imported breeding stock has accomplished. Four-pound bullfrogs were imported from Louisiana for breeding purposes.

NO GOLD SAMPLES

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—(INS)—Salt Lake City citizens demanded first consideration should the local chamber of commerce decide to give away samples of two of Utah's leading products, and "bigger and better" samples would be welcome. Margaret Huttmacher of New York recently wrote to the chamber: "Will you please send me a sample of silver and gold."

SPORTS

BASKETBALL PRACTICE STARTED BY STUDENTS

By Oscar Corn

As King Piskin descends from his ermine-bedecked throne after a very successful reign, the Prince of the indoor sports — Basketball — takes control of the Bristol High athletic destinies.

This year Bristol High is again entered in the Lower Bucks County League, of which Morrisville, Bensalem and Southampton are members; Langhorne having dropped out, Bristol High is the defending champion, having won the league championship two years straight.

The call for candidates was issued, and one hundred and ten boys handed their names to the basketball managers. This is the largest number that ever even promised to try-out for any sport in the school history. This large group will report for the first basketball practice today.

Even among this large number, Coach Dougherty will have his hands full trying to put out a winning team. Only one letter-man remains from last year, Wayne Fry, while Hermann Smith, James Rue, "Reds" Gallagher, Ernie Orazi, Jim Spencer, Oscar Corn, John De Felice and Ray Picari, of last year's reserves, are also back.

From these and last year's Junior Varsity, the local mentor will have to mold a winning combination. Although last year's second team had a good defense, they did not have an offensive "punch." This will be the big problem for Mr. Dougherty to solve.

Managers Morse, Parr and Pieo have formed an excellent schedule, with Burlington and Doylestown as new members.

The Bristol High schedule:

Jan. 5—Alummi	Home
6—Bordentown M. A.	Away
9—Upper Moreland	Away
12—Southampton*	Home
16—Bordentown High	Home

After exchanging greetings Princivilla said: "How about the loan I loaned you. How about that five dollars you owe me?" DeMarco, according to the women, said that he had told Princivilla that he would repay the loan as soon as he got work.

The DeMarco family is destitute. There are nine children, three girls and six boys. The oldest is 12 years of age and the youngest is two months old. A few months ago the house which the family was endeavoring to purchase was sold at Sheriff's sale. Today the children are practically without clothing and shoes.

BRILLIANT PASSING WINS FOR HIBERNIANS

(By T. M. Juno)

Brilliant passing and excellent defense work carried the Hibernians to the undisputed possession of the top-notch position in the Bristol Basketball League last night as the Big Green combination trounced the Y. M. A. aggregation, 35-23, on the Italian Mutual Aid floor.

The passing attack set forth by the Corson street boys completely set back the 1932 champions, who fought back strong for the first five minutes, and then trailed the remainder of the game. For the first quarter the game was tight and fast and kept the 400 fans on the edge of their seats, but from then on it was just a matter of time for the game to finish as the Hibs were the complete masters.

The stalwart on the Hibs' defense was "Big Jim" Donnelly, lanky pivot man from Florence. Held scoreless from the field, Donnelly devoted his time to the breaking up of the Y. M. A. passes and acting as the pivot man on short passes to the shooting forwards of the winning club.

Co-ordinating with Donnelly was "Little Joie" Roe. Roe was all over the court and also did his share in helping break up the Smoyer men plays as well as being the leader in the back court passing. Roe scored eight points and was responsible for several other field goals credited to players closer to the basket. The other guard, Saskowitz, was placed to guard Bailey and he did wonderful work, holding the red-headed forward of the losing club to a single field goal.

"Henny" Morgan did most of the scoring for the Red and White quintet, gathering a total of eleven points, four field and three foul goals. Roe and Dougherty scored thirteen and ten points, respectively, for the Hibs.

The Hibernians went into the lead early in the game and kept it throughout. Dougherty was fouled in the first minute of play and he sunk in the shot. Joe Roe shot a pass to Dougherty and again the Hibs' forward spun the sphere into the net, giving the Hibs a 3-0 lead. Ed. Roe was left open under the basket and another double-decker was chalked up. The first Y. M. A. score came when Bailey took a pass from Fegley and with an overhead shot rimmed a basket. Lawrence fouled Dougherty and when the Hibs' forward made the shot the scorecard read: Hibernians, 6; Y. M. A., 2.

Bailey fouled Saskowitz and the Burlington lad made the try. Joe Roe put the Big Green into a 10-2 lead when he hit the net for a double-decker and also sunk in a foul. Morgan registered three points for the Y's when he loosed a foul after scoring a field goal. The end of the quarter showed the Hibs leading, 10-5.

The ultimate winners' lead was shaved at the beginning of the second session when Morgan and Fegley made good on foul tries to bring the score 10-7. But Saskowitz took a shot from under the basket and scored, and when Dougherty sent two fouls cutting the net, the Hibs had a 14-7 lead. After Bailey missed a foul, Morgan took a long shot from the center of the floor and the leather went glimmering through the air into the net for a twin-pointer. "Ed" Roe scored from side court, putting the Greens 16-9 to the good. Dougherty added another point as the half closed, bringing the count to 17-9.

Bauer made one of his two tries good at the beginning of the third period but Dougherty retrieved the counter by sinking his foul. Donnelly's long pass to Roe was two more points for the Hibs and the score was 20-10. Morgan dribbled the entire length of the court to tally for the 1932 champions. Saskowitz missed two free shots but on a rebound from the backboard, Joe Roe picked the ball out of a scrimmage to score. Morgan was still in the fray for the Y's and made a foul. Klotz hooked Joe Roe and the youngster made good to bring the score to read 23-13. Lawrence made his first score of the night on a long shot but on a pass from Joe Roe, Dougherty counted to make the score board read: Hibernians, 25; Y. M. A., 15; at the end of the third quarter.

The Hibernian rooters went into an uproar as the Hibs started fast in the next canto. Ed. Roe counted a foul which was followed by a fast field goal. Joe Roe to Saskowitz to Ed. Roe. Ed. Roe intercepted a pass and counted another twin-pointer and this was followed by another field goal by Joe Roe. Bailey missed two foul shots for the Y's and Dougherty made one for the Dolanmen. Morgan counted for the losers with another long shot and Bauer sunk in a foul. Lawrence again registered a field goal from past the center mark. Lawrence scored a foul and then Fegley took a long pass from Bauer to score. Roe counted another field goal as the game ended.

KNIGHTS OVERCOME LEAD OF ST. ANN'S

Unleashing a powerful second half attack, the Knights of Columbus overcame the first half lead of the St. Ann's A. A. and remained in the running for the first half championship by defeating the Purple and Gold, 29-22.

During that first half struggle the Purple and Gold five appeared to be the same quintet that swept the Y. M. A. team off its feet in the first game of the season. The ultimate losers had wonderful floor work and at the half time gun were leading 14-10.

As fast as the team started in the first half, the St. Ann's squad fell the second half for the boys of Frank Craven began to hit the cords in fine regularity. Little by little the lead amassed by the Richmen was cut down until Parker scored two field goals at the end of the third session to give the Caseys an 18-16 edge.

"Lou" Parker settled the fray in the final quarter when he tapped in four more field goals which proved to be the deciding markers of the game. Parker's goals were tapped in on missed foul shots. The Knights had a bad night from the foul mark, making good but seven goals in twenty-six tries.

"Moonie" Seneca was used at center by Manager Rich of the Saints and made an impressive start. Although he failed to do any scoring of any account, Seneca guarded Morrissey so well that the high-scoring center of the Knights was held to but two field goals.

Ray Pieo was the leader in the St. Ann's scoring with nine points, six of these came in the first half to give the Saints a decided edge at the half-time. Parker was high scorer for the winners with fourteen points.

On Thursday night the Hawks will play Third Ward and the P. P. P. Co. meets the Odd Fellows.

Why Get Up Nights?

THIS 25c TEST FREE If It Fails

Use this bladder laxative. Drive out the impurities and excess acids which cause the irritation that wakes you up. Get a regular 25 cent box of BUKETS, made from buchu leaves, juniper oil, etc. After four days test, if not satisfied, go back and get your 25c. They work on the bladder similar to castor oil on the bowels. Bladder irregularity is nature's danger signal and may warn you of trouble. You are bound to feel better after this cleansing and you get your regular sleep. Serrill Douglass says BUKETS is a best seller.—(Adv.)
